

PUBLISHED: Friday, July 3, 2009

"Sirens of Chrome" author to speak at Sloan Museum

FLINT -- Margery Krevsky, author of "Sirens of Chrome" will be at Sloan Museum for a talk about her book as well as a book signing from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. July 11 at Sloan Museum in Flint.

The event is free with museum admission or purchase of the book.

The speech will entail how to become involved with being an automotive model and Krevsky's experiences in the industry.

"Sirens of Chrome" is a visual joyride through auto show history. The focus isn't simply sheet metal; it's on the distinctly human presence. These human hood ornaments are descendants of the Sirens of ancient Greek lore.

Sloan Museum is located at 1221 E. Kearsley Street.